Course Objectives

1. You'll learn this
2. And also that
3. Perhaps some of this too.

Required Readings

[1] J. A. Vasquez. The War Puzzle Revisited. New York, NY: Cambridge University Press, 2009.

[2] R. H. Wagner. War and the State: The Theory of International Politics. Ann Arbor, MI: The University of Michigan Press, 2007.

Course Policy

I will detail the policy for this course below. Basically, don't cheat and try to learn stuff. Don't be that guy.

Grading Policy

- 20% of your grade will be determined by a midterm during normal class hours.

- 20% of your grade will be determined by a term paper that documents your appreciation of Foghat's "Slow Ride", the most important song ever written. "Slow Ride" is what Mozart wishes Don Giovanni could have been.
- 10% of your grade will be determined by your attendance and participation in class. Generally, ask questions and answer them.
- 20% of your grade will be determined by a 20-page term paper on when exactly "The Love Boat" jumped the proverbial shark. You will address whether this shark-jumping can be attributed to Ted McGinley, the introduction of Jill Whelan as "Vicki", or some other cause.
- 30% of your grade will be determined by a final exam.

E-mail Policy

I am usually quick to respond to student e-mails. However, student e-mails tend to do several things that try my patience. I have a new policy, effective Fall 2016, that outlines why I will not respond to certain e-mails students send. Multiple rationales follow.

1. The student could answer his/her own inquiry by reading the syllabus.
2. The student missed class for which there was no exam. I do not need to know the exact reason for a missed class. Students with excusable absences are responsible for giving me a note in hard copy that documents the reason for the missed class. An e-mail is unnecessary unless the impromptu absence involved missing a midterm or final.
3. The student wants to know what topics s/he missed during a class s/he skipped. The answer is always "you missed what was on the syllabus."
4. The student is protesting a grade without reference to specific points of objection. See the policy on protesting a grade in the syllabus. These e-mails tend to be expressive utility on the part of the student and do not require a response from me. Students interested in improving their knowledge of material should see me during office hours.
5. The students wants to know how many classes s/he missed at some point during the semester. I assume the student has a better answer to that question than me until the end of the semester.
6. The student is requesting an extension on an assignment for which the syllabus already established the deadline. The answer is always "no".
7. The student is "grade grubbing" or asking to round up a grade. The answer is always "no".
8. The student is asking for an extra credit opportunity, a request that amounts to more grading for the professor. The answer is "no".

Make-Up Exam Policy

There are NO make-ups for missed exams. Don't bother asking.

Academic Dishonesty Policy

Don't cheat. Don't be that guy. Yes, you. You know exactly what I'm talking about too.

Disabilities Policy

Federal law mandates the provision of services at the university-level to qualified students with disabilities. Make sure to include all that relevant information here.

Class Schedule

Students must read the following before Tuesday's class session. Important: class readings are subject to change, contingent on mitigating circumstances and the progress we make as a class. Students are encouraged to attend lectures and check the course website for updates.

Week 01, 08/15 - 08/19: Syllabus Day

No class Thursday (Political scientists usually have a conference to start the semester).
